RE: KENT Marine Reef Carbon - Retailers

You are being notified as you have purchased KENT Reef Carbon from Central Aquatics since November of 2011.

There is a quality concern with KENT Marine Reef Carbon manufactured between December 5th of 2011 and February 8th of 2012. The concern is that the batch of carbon contained unusually high levels of heavy metals which have an adverse effect on stony corals and clams in marine settings. When used in freshwater applications this concern would most likely be unnoticeable.

Please review your existing inventory. Product marked on the master carton with a MFG date between 12/5/11 and 2/8/12 should be pulled from inventory and returned to your distributor for credit. Individual items should also be pulled from inventory and returned to your distributor for credit. Below are the items affected and the product dates that should be observed.
